

A Page with Me

Shared reading · Birth to two

Dad sat beside me
and opened a little book.

On the page was a blue door.
“Door,” he said.

Then he waited.
I looked at the page.

I touched the blue door with one finger.
“You saw it,” said Dad.

He lifted the edge of the thick page.
I held it with him.
Together, we turned it slowly.

On the next page was a little house.
Dad did not quiz me. We looked together.
A page for him, and a page with me.

Read and talk together

An original fictional read-aloud. The full text is aimed around 18–24 months within the birth-to-two stage.

Choose an age-appropriate book and name one thing on the page. Wait for your child's signal instead of quizzing them. They may help turn a sturdy page with close supervision. The aim is shared attention and friendly time together.
